About

With over a decade of experience, Katie specializes in electronic discovery and discovery strategy, representing clients in complex, multi-faceted litigation and matters involving overlapping regulatory demands. She has successfully guided clients through intricate multi-agency investigations, ensuring consistency and compliance across regulators while managing the challenges posed by conflicting priorities and requirements.

Her practice spans industries such as product liability, pharmaceuticals, environmental issues, and mass torts, as well as high-stakes governmental and internal investigations initiated by agencies like the U.S., Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), the California Air Resources Board (CARB), the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York, and various State Attorneys General.

Katie is also well-versed in cross-border discovery and the unique complexities it presents. She has extensive experience handling foreign and multi-language data, addressing cross-border legal and regulatory considerations, and managing compliance with data privacy laws and frameworks. Her expertise includes advising clients on defensible workflows for the preservation, review, and production of foreign language documents, leveraging technology-assisted review and translation tools to ensure accuracy and efficiency in multilingual matters.

Katie excels at developing defensible, cost-effective discovery strategies tailored to the specific needs of each matter, from early case assessment through document review and production. She works closely with in-house counsel, co-counsel, technology service providers and vendor partners to ensure consistency, efficiency and quality across all phases of the discovery lifecycle.

Katie's comprehensive approach to discovery, combined with her ability to navigate the complexities of regulatory investigations and cross-border matters, makes her a trusted advisor to clients facing high-stakes legal challenges.
